Terrible Fate of a Brave Man. The two sections had come within a few feet of each other in their mad race when De blois decided to jump. He leaped with all his might across the chasm, but he fell short and dropped to the track below and was ground to pieces by the pursning cars. The chase of the flying cars was abandoned by the horror-stricken train hands, and the speed of the locomotive was checked. The runaway cars kept on with still increasing speed toward Brookfield. It was chance and prompt presence of mind that averted a appearing man, who gave his name as Davis, settled at Nashville, Tenn., last March, and succeeded in borrowing money from several persons there. Saturday he left suddenly, and at the same time Mrs. W. M. Pettey disappeared. It transpired that the man's real name was Bonahan and Mrs. Pettey was his divorced wife. He was formerly a Presbyterian minister, but was exmerly a Presbyterian minister, but was expelled because of his questionable transactions. After he went to Nashville he visityards in Alexandria, Va., or at the company's ed his former wife, and she received him notwithstanding the protests of her husband. Saturday when Mr. Pettey returned home he found a note from his wife, stating that she was satisfied they were living in adul-tery, as she had a husband living. Pettey is quite sure his wife has not deserted him for Bonahan, but thinks he is the cause of the disruption of his formerly happy home.

A brave man lost his life while striving to prevent a great disaster on the Boston and Albany road near Brookfield, Mass., last Wednesday afternoon. A freight train climbing the long steep grade between South Spencer and East Brookfield, broke apart near the former station, and the rear cars started off at a speed that soon became terrible. There was no one on board the runaway cars to set the brakes. The grade continued steadily down hill for more than five miles to Brookfield, and if the cars could not be stopped before reaching the station, there they were sure to crash into an east-bound passenger train which was almost due. James Deblois was the conductor of the broken train. He signalled his engineer to reverse and run back at full speed in pursuit of the runaway cars. The chase was instantly begun, and the distance between the two sections of the train rapidly lessened. The speed was so great, how-eyer, that Conductor Deblois dared not run up close enough to couple on the flying cars, for the shock would probably have detailed both sections of the train and re-sulted in a general wreck. Brake-men partly controlled the speed of the pursuing cars when the runaway section was almost reached, and Conductor Deblois prepared to jump over the space between the two sections. He could then set the brakes on the runaway cars and get them noder control while the other section of the train was being slowed down in the same manner great calamity. The wild cars had almost reached the East Brookfield station when Baggagemaster James Corcoran, standing on Steam Flooring & Planing Mill the platform, happened to catch sight of them. He took in the situation in an instant, and thought of the approaching pas-senger train, only two miles further on. He was within a few feet of a switch leading to an unoccupied siding. He ran to it, un-locked it, and threw the lever just as the cars came abreast of him. The cars took the siding at first, but the speed was so great that they could not hold to the suddenly deflected rail, and they plunged in a heap down the bank and into the marsh meadows.

All kinds of MEATS and VEGETABLES A SUCCESSFUL OPERATION .- A patient, pronounced cured, was discharged from the Children's Hospital, Washington. on Saturday whose case will be recorded in medical annals as a very important one. One week from last Friday Wm. Dipple aged 16 years, living at Brightwood, while engaged in playing base ball thoughtlessly picked a cockelburr (commonly known as "nigger lice" or "sheep lice") from a bush beside him. Being on one of the bases, and a run being made, he quickly placed the burr between his teeth while he caught the ball, which was then thrown to him. In the excitement of the moment he opened his citement of the moment he opened his mouth, and the burr was drawn down his throat by a breath and fastened itself in the boy's larynx, from which place it was impossible to displace it. The boy was taken to a physician of Brightwood, who tried to remove the prickly burr with his tweezers, but finding it too far down the throat and firmly lodged in its place, at once drove the patient to the Children's Hospital, Washington. It was there found necessary to per-form the operation of tracheotomy, which was done by Dr. J. Ford Thompson, and consisted of cutting through the windpipe to the larynx, when the burr was removed and
